Keyser's Corner

Broadband Q & A

Writer Tom Tate gets the latest on BARC's broadband project from CEO Mike Keyser.

In late August, BARC announced it was moving forward with its groundbreaking fiber-to-the-home project, which brings ultra-high-speed fiber-based internet directly to the customer's doorstep. Tom Tate recently sat down with Mike Keyser, BARC's CEO, to find out more about the project and learn about the next steps.

Q: Back in August 2015, BARC announced it had reached its goal of 1,550 pre-registrations on barc.crowdfiber.com (BARC now has 1,668 as of this writing). So what took you so long to make the announcement you're moving forward to construction?

A: Believe it or not, it was all financing related. We had several starts and stops with various lenders. At times it was discouraging, but we just kept grinding. It was a long but necessary journey for all of us. Our business plan is much stronger than it was a year ago. And we have a very supportive partner in the lender we are using.

BARC Electric Cooperative is an equal opportunity provider and employer.

Q: BARC is building the project in phases, with Phase 1 encompassing areas of Rockbridge and the city of Lexington. How can members learn more about this phase of the project?

A: The project has a website — barc.crowdfiber.com — where customers can read updates and see a rough idea of the packages we will offer. It also has an interactive map where customers can see the eligible area for Phase 1 and even pre-register for service without any financial commitment.

Q: What about Phase 2 and beyond?

A: The plan is to build out substation by substation over the next 7 to 8 years. If all goes as planned, it will take two more phases to completely build out the system with fiber. Obviously, each subsequent phase is predicated on the success of the prior phase. As a cooperative, our customers are our owners, so we're all in this together. The project's success or failure — including expansion — is predicated on the support of our members. In total, approximately $66 million will be invested in 1,500 miles of fiber, enabling us to connect more than 13,000 customers to the network.

Q: Back to Phase 1 — I understand you're providing free fiber service drops to the first 1,850 customers who pre-register at barc.crowdfiber.com. Can you tell me more about that?

A: Phase 1 encompasses 400 miles of fiber, providing direct fiber access to more than 4,100 homes and businesses. We wouldn't have a business case if we connected everybody for free. So for Phase 1, we baked into the business plan as many free service connections as possible while still making a business case. That number is 1,850. To be eligible, a customer must pre-register for service at barc.crowdfiber.com and ultimately become a subscriber when the time comes. If we don't have 1,850 confirmed customers by the time of construction, those free connections expire. After construction, everyone will pay a yet-to-be-determined connection fee.

Q: Are non-BARC members eligible for service?

A: Yes. Because we are doing this through a subsidiary (BARConnects), we are able to offer service to non-BARC customers as well as BARC members. In fact, because the non-BARC customers live in the more densely populated areas, it actually helps us serve more BARC members. And those revenues from non-BARC customers accrue to the benefit of BARC member-owners as well.

Q: What services is BARConnects offering?

A: We're planning to offer triple-play. That is fiber-based internet, phone and television. By bundling those services together, customers should be able to save a lot of money against what they are paying now, and get faster internet speeds. And I may be biased, but I also think they will get better, more personalized service.

Q: All the services come over the fiber?

A: Yes, that's correct. We bring the fiber all the way into the customer's home. We provide the modem/router as well. It should be a completely seamless "worry-free" transition for customers, to borrow a phrase we use on the electric side.

Q: When do customers select packages? When will you have pricing?

A: Among other things, over the next several months, we will be working to find the very best partners and vendors for the project. As you can imagine, it will be a major undertaking to acquire all the materials, equipment, software and services needed for us to build and operate the network. Once we have locked all that down, we will finalize our packages and pricing and begin contacting pre-registered customers to sign them up for service. I imagine that will happen in the next six months or so.

Q: Let's step back for a moment. The parallel between broadband internet today and electricity in the 1930s is strikingly similar. In the 1930s, large, for-profit investor-owned electric companies cherry-picked the densely populated areas, and much of rural America was without electricity. In response, rural Americans banded together to form not-for-profit customer-owned cooperatives to provide electricity. Today, large, for-profit corporations provide high-speed internet to the cities and densely populated areas, causing a "digital divide" between rural and urban America. It would seem that electric cooperatives like BARC are perfectly situated to serve this unmet need.

A: The thing that makes us uniquely positioned for this is, not only do we have the bucket trucks, the poles, and the linemen, but we also have the need ourselves. We suffer from the same communication woes as our members, and yet it has become vital that we have robust communications with our system devices and meters. Customer expectations around electric service are not what they were 15 or 20 years ago. They expect the same level of reliability as they would get in a city. In order to provide that, we must modernize, and that starts with communications.

Q: BARC has been modernizing in many different ways over the last few years. It seems like this is just the next logical progression.

A: I would agree with that. It's amazing to think about how far we've come in the six years I've been at BARC. Replacing our outdated metering system and installing our new OMS (outage management system) are two huge advances. We're in the process of replacing our outdated SCADA system. We own the first and only community solar project in Virginia. We have a base of operations in Rockbridge now. But that is just the beginning. Our fiber network will open up a world of possibilities for both BARC and our customers — and hopefully will lead to economic development for our service territory as well.

Q: Well, this has been very educational. Thank you for taking the time to sit down with me. Any final words?

A: What makes this project special for me is that we're bringing members a service that they would likely never get if we don't take it upon ourselves to provide it. That is our core mission, plain and simple. It's why our forefathers built BARC's electric system in the first place. It's as close as we will ever come to knowing what it felt like to electrify a home. I can't wait to experience that feeling.

Note from the author: I'm sure there are a lot of questions out there that I have not asked. Please feel free to email me at ctt1953@hotmail.com with your questions and we will get them answered in subsequent magazine issues. Thank you for your support of the project.

Announcing: 'Power From The Heart'

For less than a $1/month you can help someone avoid the loss of power at their home.

We are pleased to announce a new program called Power From The Heart. It seems fitting to announce this program in October, which is National Cooperative Month. It is during this month that we celebrate the benefits and values of cooperatives. Power From The Heart is built upon the foundation of members-helping-members. Please read on and learn about this important new program.

The program relies on members volunteering to have their bills rounded-up. Rounded-up funds are deposited in a special account and used to help qualified members facing financial hardships. For less than $1/month you can begin helping fellow members avoid the loss of power at their home.

FUNDING PURPOSE: KEEPING THE "POWER" ON

The program helps BARC members that are facing a financial hardship pay their electric bills. It is meant as a last resort where no other source of help remains available, and can only be used in emergency situations — it is not a fund to rely upon regularly. We are especially interested in helping the elderly and those facing unique and difficult hardships. Power From The Heart will be administered by well-established social service organizations already serving our members.

FUNDING IS "FROM THE HEART"

Funding for the program comes by voluntary member participation. If you choose to participate, your monthly bill will be rounded up to the next whole dollar. For example, if your actual bill is $50.40, you would be billed $51. This additional 60 cents, along with amounts from other participating members, will be set aside for the program.

SUMMARY COMMENTS

While 60 cents may seem insignificant, if all BARC members participated, the annual contribution to the program would be about $75,000. Power From The Heart is scheduled to start late this fall.

Please consider "rounding-up" your monthly bill to help us launch this very important program. Participation is voluntary. You can quit at any time.

Power From The Heart provides you with the joy of helping fellow members who are facing a unique and difficult financial hardship keep their lights on. The program truly is "POWER FROM THE HEART."

Vampire Loads | by Tom Tate

There are lots of things drawing power around the average home. While most are noticeable such as lights and appliances, some are surreptitious, draining electricity from the grid unnoticed by the homeowner. These have come to be called vampire loads. So, what are these malicious denizens of electric consumption? In a word, power adapters and instant-on appliances. Research indicates that these can account for 4 to 5 percent of total household energy use.

It seems like every digital device we buy these days is obliged to arrive with a power adapter. That makes sense because most electronic devices run on voltages way below the household standard of 120. They seem innocuous enough, just clinging to the wall at the outlet. Some don't even feel warm when their device is not connected to them. But don't be deceived! They are slowly and quietly sipping electricity.

Then there are appliances, generally of the entertainment variety, that have instant-on or always-on settings. Take the television for one example. If you can hit the power button and your TV comes on instantly, it is using the instant-on setting. Manufacturers heard complaints about televisions taking so long to get to the picture that they built in this function. In essence, your TV is drawing substantial power even when it looks like it is off.

The other culprit is gaming consoles. Even when you hit the power button, many remain on so they can receive software updates and perform other functions. When you consider some consoles can consume as much electricity as a refrigerator, you really do want them turned all the way off.

So, how can you tackle these vampires? A wooden stake through the television is going to create viewing issues and hanging garlic wreaths around power adapters is going to raise a stink, literally. Here are some options.

- For your TV, browse its menu to turn off the instant-on feature.
- For consoles and other AV equipment associated with a TV, purchase a smart strip. These are power strips with one active or master outlet. The device plugged in here receives power all the time and when the strip sees that it is turned on, power to the rest of the outlets is also turned on.
- Simply unplug the adapters when not in use. This works well for those out in the open but not so well for those behind furniture or otherwise hard to reach. For those, go with the smart strip.
- Unplug any appliance with an electronic display that you don't use regularly.

Now that you have tamed the energy vampires, why not give the rest of your home an energy tune-up? Head to our online energy audit (click one of the dark blue buttons in the upper right corner of www.barcelectric.com) and see what is using watts, plus get great tips for energy-saving tactics. Your monthly electric bill will thank you.

National Cooperative Month

by Tom Tate

Every October, BARC Electric joins more than 40,000 cooperatives worldwide to celebrate National Cooperative Month. These cooperatives serve more than 120 million people and make a real difference in their communities as well as in the lives of their members.

So, besides electric co-ops, what other types of businesses follow the cooperative business model? Some notable ones here in the U.S. include:

Nationwide Insurance,
Ace and True Value Hardware,
REI,
Land O'Lakes,
Cabot Creamery,
Blue Diamond Growers, and Ocean Spray.

You will find the co-op model in agriculture, finance, brew pubs (one in Austin, Texas, anyway), housing, student and worker services, and so on. These organizations are organized in a manner where the members take precedence over providing financial returns to stockholders, which makes them much more responsive to their members.

Let me walk you through some of the history and statistics of electric cooperatives here in the United States. The rural electric co-op movement was researched at the turn of the 20th century but made it no further than a study document. Then, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt went on vacation to a rural locale and discovered they had no power, he determined that his administration would find a way to remedy that situation.

Having grown up in an area with electricity, he realized the benefits having reliable power could bring to the populace. For one thing, there were the labor-saving devices of washing machines and stoves along with electrified farm equipment like milkers. But more importantly, electricity meant that rural areas could attract larger businesses and build their economies beyond a total reliance on agriculture.

So, the study paper was dusted off and the Rural Electrification Administration was set up by executive order in May of 1935. A year later, the Rural Electrification Act was passed allowing money to be provided to electric cooperatives for the purpose of bringing electric service to all rural Americans. BARC Electric was founded in 1938 and the rest, as they say, is history.

Covering approximately 60 percent of the land mass of the lower 48 states, electric co-ops are a powerful force in the electric industry of the United States as the following facts and figures indicate:

- 840 distribution and 65 G&T cooperatives, a total of 905 National Rural Electric Cooperative Association co-op members;
- Serve an estimated 42 million people in 47 states;

- 18.5 million businesses, homes, schools, churches, farms, irrigation systems and other establishments in 2,500 of 3,141 counties in the U.S.;
- More than 12 percent of the nation's meters are customers of rural electric co-ops.

Cooperatives continue to evolve and grow with the changing needs of their members. BARC Electric has tackled the issue of making solar power available to members who otherwise cannot access it, is providing as many advanced tools as possible to help members personalize and automate their experience with their cooperative, and is constantly working to make the electric service experience worry-free.

If you haven't read the CEO's column yet, I encourage you to do so. Once more, rural Americans are being faced with an economic and quality-of-life issue brought about by the lack of reliable, affordable, high-speed Internet service. Without electricity, rural America was not attractive to big employers. So today, without high-speed internet, these employers cannot locate in rural areas because of the importance of data and worldwide access to modern business operations. History is on the verge of repeating itself and cooperatives will be there to fill the gap.

Balance Raw Eggs on the Equinox

by Tom Tate

This is a myth I encountered while living in a small town north of Raleigh. While visiting with some neighbors on the first day of the spring equinox, we were asked if we knew you could stand a raw egg on its end on the first day of each equinox. Having never heard of this practice, we were immediately intrigued and asked for a demonstration. Much to our surprise, our neighbor proceeded to stand a couple of raw eggs on end. I have to admit that seeing eggs in this position is a touch unsettling.

The theory behind this phenomenon is that Earth's axis is perpendicular to the sun during the equinoxes, allowing for this uncanny balancing act. Of course, I had to research this and it turns out that you should be able to do the balancing act on any day of the year. While the internet is great for many things, bursting harmless and quaint myths like this seems callous at times.

Since that first demonstration, I have balanced eggs on a couple of equinoxes with great success. I have included a picture of two eggs happily upright from one such effort. Yes, there is a thin towel that gave the eggs a grippy surface, but it is still fun. I have also failed to have success on any other days. Perhaps it is subconscious on my part but I like this myth the way it was explained to me. I use the internet to validate so many other things I think just this once I will ignore what I learned.

Give it a try and see what you can come up with. Just do it in a location well away from table and counter edges unless scrambled eggs are on the menu.

Capital Credits Returned

The following members were mailed payments of Capital Credits that they did not cash. The payments were based on Capital Credit Allocations for previous years and refunded in December 2013, 2014 and 2015.

If you know the whereabouts of any of these people, DO NOT CALL, but have the individual(s) or their legal representative(s) contact the cooperative office to claim their payment. Call our customer accounting department at 1-800-846-2272 to claim any outstanding payments.
